

Faith Kirkham Hawkins

Assistant Vice Chancellor for Research

Faith Kirkham Hawkins, Assistant Vice Chancellor for Research, joined UC San Diego in September 2019. She previously served as Associate Vice President for Research Development and Strategic Initiatives (2016-2019) and Chief of Staff to the Vice President for Research (2009-2016) at Indiana University. She was also on the faculty at Emory University's Candler School of Theology and Gustavus Adolphus College (St. Peter, MN). Dr. Hawkins was a member of the inaugural class of the APLU Council on Research Leadership Fellows (2017-18). She received her undergraduate degree from Smith College, her master's degree from Princeton Theological Seminary, and her Ph D. from Emory University.

At UC San Diego, Dr. Hawkins works with colleagues across campus to develop and promote essential services and resources that enhance our world-class research enterprise; enable partnerships between UC San Diego and government, industry, and other research institutions; and support infrastructure and policies that promote innovation.
